Hi.

In tennis, hold your diagonal well and it's super important. This is particularly illustrated in doubles matches where we have to hold the diagonal until we find the fault or until we obtain the favorable ball. With this little exercise, both fun and useful, we will train ourselves on the one hand to hold the forehand diagonal and on the other hand to move well on the court.

Description and purpose of the exercise:

- 10 point game
- Players must play exclusively forehand (If backhand, point lost).
- Players must play exclusively in the highlighted half courts.

By testing this exercise you will quickly notice that if you play towards the yellow dotted lines the opponent will be in difficulty and will tend to play from the backhand (even though he has no right to). This is one of the benefits of the exercise, we must anticipate the trajectory and quickly position ourselves.
